Teachers will be able to use ICT judiciously when he/she is able to do content analysis and choose the appropriate media based on the nature of content and treatment to be given to enable students to understand easily.

Parameter 2: Context

Context analysis is a method to analyze the environment in which an ICT enabled teaching-learning process operates. Context analysis considers the entire environment of a teaching-learning situation.

states of Delhi, locate the region in which it is located, etc. technology can be used. Which media is to be used to teach this content? Image, video, simulation, animation - which of these will be appropriate to use? Though all these types of digital content like video, audio, image etc. can be used, a digital map/globe in software like Bhuvan or Marble would be more appropriate to show the regions based on the requirement.

Certain content requires experiential learning which any PPT, video and multimedia can not provide. In some cases, due to unavailability of resources, the impossibility of the action, etc. technology use is a must. For example, in a biology class dissection of animals and plants is a routine scene. But nowadays the dissection of animals is considered unethical and illegal. Hence, showing students a multimedia-based virtual dissection is a far better option for the teachers. Hence, it is also important to choose the right media/technology based on the nature of the content. Therefore, the questions to be thought of while choosing media/technology include:

- Is ICT necessary for the teaching and learning of a particular content?
- If yes, what type of ICT/ media resource is to be used?

Parameters to be Considered While Integrating ICT

The major parameters to be considered are:

1. Nature of content
2. Context in terms of infrastructure and human resource
3. Pedagogy approaches of teaching and learning
4. Type of technology and its features

Parameter 1: Nature of Content

Is it essential to use ICT for teaching or learning for every content?

Content transacted at the secondary stage may include facts, concepts, theories, procedures, generalisations, prescriptions, etc. which can be broadly classified under four dimensions of knowledge.

Depending on the content type it is necessary to decide whether the use of technology is required. If required, the next step is to think about what type of technology or media is required. For example, to teach students the factual knowledge that ‘New Delhi is the capital of India’ there is no need for technology. But if it is required to describe the neighbouring

Reflect on the following-

1. What are the ICT facilities available in your school or with learners?
2. How does the support system in the school/ home motivate the use of ICT?
3. What ICT competencies should a teacher possess?
4. Can all students use ICT?
5. Are the ICT tools selected based on facilities available and the characteristics of learners?

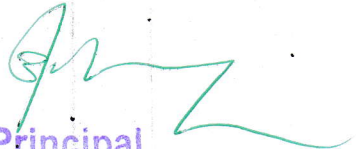

While analysing the classroom environment, two aspects to be taken care of are infrastructure and human resources. Infrastructure includes the general infrastructure of a classroom like availability of electricity, projection system, internet connectivity, availability of printers, desktop PCs/ laptop/ tablets, etc. Human resource refers to the availability of teachers/ technical persons, competency of the teacher in handling ICT, etc.

Let us consider a scenario where students are not able to attend regular schooling in the face to face mode due to some pandemic like COVID - 19. In this context, using technology may help in continuing teaching, learning and assessment in online mode, partially online or in complete offline modes like TV and radio. But a few questions to be thought while planning is:

- What facilities are available with teachers and students?
- What digital competency teachers, students and parents have to benefit from online classes?
- How diversity could be addressed even while using digital technology?

It is very important for the teacher to plan the intervention keeping the context in mind.

A teacher also needs to understand the learner to select appropriate strategies and ICT tools/ resources to enhance learning. Four dimensions of the learner that needs to be understood for using ICT are as follows:

1. Demographics: A teacher may consider class size, diversity in terms of age, cultural context, socio-economic status, gender, marginality, geographical location and availability/access to technology.
2. Cognitive and prior knowledge: Educational level, primary, upper primary, prerequisite knowledge and experience, learning style, level of digital literacy, cognitive ability.
3. Affective/ Social: Teachers and students may introspect their attitude towards education and learning, online learning environments, attitude towards self, motivational level, interpersonal relationships and area of Interest; Hence it is important to understand these aspects of the students while teaching.
4. Physiological: A teacher may be aware of the general physical and emotional health and special needs of her students. Such awareness will help her decide what medical and therapeutic help is to be suggested and what assistive technologies are to be adopted.

For example, while providing educational resources to a child who is visually challenged, ICT tools like text to speech play a vital role in the communication of the information. Making the resources open and free provides equal access to children from lower economic backgrounds. Thus understanding the learner helps in selecting appropriate ICT and make the classroom more inclusive.
